About

Aishwarya Sanchety is an Indian designer and photographer currently based in London. Her formal design practice focuses on the intersection of print and digital media within publication, editorial design, visual identity & branding, website design, art direction and product photography.

As she visualises her practice and its future, Aishwarya plans to explore how visual design can be both culturally impactful and revealing. Hoping to always collaborate with creative individuals from various practices and disciplines to explore the possibilities of combining design, textiles, art, and technology.
